

FIRST MONTH

You should only tell me your affections are salt-bitter like the ocean, your grasping like the tiny blue clams digging, digging after every wave.

You thought to make my body into willows, living near the water, but not in it.

Ashley Danielle Ryle